Can you learn it off by heart?

Can you write your own funny poem based on some of the examples you have read?

Puppet Show

Make shadow puppets or finger puppets. Make up a story to act out for the rest of your family and cheer them up. Can your brothers or sisters join in and make extra characters. Can you make a stage for the show? You could even film it so we can watch them when we're all back!

Keep a diary/journal

Keep a diary of all the exciting things you are doing over the weeks we are not in school. Draw pictures of the things you see, the people you facetime, the activities you do at home. Take photos and put them in your diary.

How do you feel each day?

We want to hear all about every thing you have been up to when we all come back together.

Write a Letter and post it!

Over the next few weeks, there will be many people who can't leave their houses or have visitors. Why not cheer them up by writing a letter, telling them about what you have been doing in school, clubs you go to and what you're doing at home. A letter through their letterbox will put a big smile on their faces!

Postcard from North America

Choose an area of North America and send a postcard. Draw a picture on one side that represents where you're visiting. Then on the other side, explain where you are, what you have seen, what the weather is like, where you are staying etc...

Use what you already know or carry out some research to write about a new area of North America—your choice!

Write a short story

When you're stuck in your house, why not create an imaginary world you can adventure through in your head. Make yourself the main character. Where will you go? Who will you meet? What adventures will you have?
